

Technical committees: Why should you join?

Technical committees are your opportunity to have a direct impact on the lives of Canadians living with disabilities.

Reasons to join

Work with other experts!

Have your voice heard!

Shape the standards!

Have a meaningful impact!

Be a leader for inclusion!

What you will do

Research existing standards

Collaborate with other members to write standards

Share your lived experience

Join a task group that works for your interest in the subject

Meet to share your findings

Discuss your area of expertise

Build a more inclusive and accessible Canada

Who can apply?

We look for representatives from each of the following categories:

People with disabilities

Business and industry

Governmental authorities

Consumers and public interest

Labour and unions

Academic and research bodies

Non-governmental organizations

Standards development bodies

Each official language and region in Canada

Our aim: balanced and inclusive teams that value the lived experience of people with disabilities.

Compensation

Technical committee members are volunteers. However, individuals with disabilities not paid by organizations will be compensated for their role as experts on our technical committees.

Could it be you?

Do you face accessibility barriers every day?
Are you close to someone with a disability?
Are you an accessibility expert?
We need your expertise!

Find out about the next opportunity to participate by visiting our website, registering to our newsletter, or following us on social media.

